Playoff Night At the MSBL World Series Office Is A Hectic Place

The Verification Process Remains A Key Component In Division Playoff Seedings

By Tom Prendergast

On most nights, the MSBL WS staff is on auto pilot. Typically we will receive 2 and maybe 3 scores from any single game. The umpires report the score first, followed by the team that wins and on occasion the losing team. Once in a while all 3 scores will match, but that's rare. So part of the process we go through on the final night of pool play is to contact the potential playoff teams and verify their game scores. Needless to say this is time consuming and since it's done by phone, a somewhat tedious endeavor. More often than not we get a consensus on final scores but occasionally we will run into a situation where both teams are adamant that their book is correct. For example, earlier this week we had a score 28-0 score called in. The losing team reported 26-0. Both teams sent a picture of their scorebook. While they each had the same number of batters coming to the plate, one of the innings didn't match with total runs scored. In this case, the 6 and 7 hole batters progress wasn't filled in and therefore they were't showing up as scoring, when in fact they did. And in a few cases the app we are using doesn't sort our standings based on our tie breakers. So expect a phone call from us!
